PROBLEM

Learning to code should be accessible to everyone. University programming courses take a long time to complete and have high course fees. Online courses and tutorials through sites such as Udemy and Lynda are produced for a mass audience and individual feedback can be hard to get. Free resources such as forums and articles vary greatly in their quality and may not suit everyone, particularly beginners.

SOLUTION

CodeFlow aims to bridge the gap and combine the best of all these resources - the convenience and accessibility of online learning, with the personalised and engaging nature of face-to-face lessons.
